WORLD of COLOUR

If used effectively, colour is one of the most powerful tools a hospitality entrepreneur can wield – colour is a form of non-verbal communication with which one can speak volumes in a fraction of a second. Here we explore how colour shapes visual perception.

Think of a vegetarian restaurant with a salad bar. Now think of the colour that you associate with it. We don't need to be mind readers to deduce that the likely colour you have in mind is green. How about the colours of the latest fast food joint you visited? Probably yellow and red (or a combination of the two, as found at one of the larger burger chains around). What was the dominant tint in that big city bar during that fun night out? If it was a loud and busy one, chances are it was red. If the tippie was enjoyed in a more sophisticated milieu, a good guess is blue.

UNCONSCIOUS INFLUENCE

Colour plays a vital role in visual experiences. Whether you notice or not, it has an effect on your mind, body and emotions. In a globalized world, colour requires less time to translate than any other means of communication. Often perceived on an unconscious level, it effectively alters our mood, and influences our behaviour as well as our physical and mental well-being.

WE SAW IT FIRST

As sight is the principal way to perceive colour, the visual experience of how a hospitality environment is designed – what colours the walls are, how the table is decorated and what the servers are wearing – is crucial. In fact, psychologists suggest that colour impression accounts for 60% of the acceptance or rejection of a product or service.

Put yourself in the shoes of your guest. One of the main factors in deciding on where to go for a

FACTS ABOUT COLOUR

INTUITION

Making a decision about colour is 95% intuitive and emotional, and only 5% rational.

EXPERIENCE

75% of human experience is filtered through our eyes, making colour a very important ingredient in life.

JUDGEMENT

Up to 90% of snap judgement made about products can be based on colour alone.

ACCEPTANCE

Psychologists suggest that colour impression accounts for 60% of the acceptance or rejection of a product or service.

meal, a cocktail or somewhere to sleep is interlinked with how you want to feel during that particular moment. The psychology of colour, alongside other key hospitality components, such as quality of food and service, sets the feel of a place, whether it is relaxing and quiet or uplifting and playful. Simply put, colour triggers emotional response – and the last thing a business would want to do is drive away customers by using colour in the wrong way.

PICKING A SWATCH

So how, out of the ten million colours identified in the world, does one go about choosing the right colour(s) for one's business? There are a few important universal pointers to take into account when looking at how to design a space, set a table or create a coherent brand identity. It is important to identify the personality of the business. What atmosphere and mood do you wish to create? How do you want your clientele to feel? Different colours are associated with different emotions and when these are used to tell a business story, they have a truly powerful effect.

From deep red to saturated plum, the line-up below lists colours, the moods associated with them and successful examples of their usage. Experts in colour psychology generally suggest avoiding blues, purples and yellows to any great extent. Instead, consider using these hues as complements to more neutral colours, choosing to feature them solely on table tops.

A COLOURFUL WORLD

Your establishment may have certain themes that you wish to convey to your customers. Different themes may require different colours and this is where interchangeable details such as flowers, napkins, table covers and tableware come into play. While the space itself could be likened to an artist's white canvas, the accessories and details are the paints with which the creative mind rocks his or her world. Have fun exploring all the hues on offer – after all, our world is a colourful and vivid one.

KEY Words

Named Norway's best hotel by hotels.com in 2015, Scandic Elgstua is located on the outskirts of Elverum. We spoke to Nina Bogerud Caspari, who has been hotel director there for 4 years.

Nina sees working with Duni as very positive. She adds that the best thing about being a hotel director is being a great host for the guests.

"Duni is a very solution-oriented and service-minded company. What's more, the collection offers great variety. This makes it easy for the Scandic assortment group to choose both seasonal and year-round products."

Doilies are used in the bathrooms for hygiene products and glasses.

SCANDIC ELGSTUA [HOTEL]

The hotel is within walking distance of two of the most visited museums in Norway: the Norwegian Forest Museum and Glomdal open-air museum. Elverum golf club has one of Norway's finest 18-hole forest golf courses. The closest neighbour is Terningen Arena – a top modern campus for the university college Høgskolen i Hedmark, the premises for Elverum handball club, one of the country's finest gymnastics halls, plus a climbing hall, concert hall, and outdoor facilities for athletics, football, tennis and more.

In the winter, there's always miles and miles of newly prepared cross country skiing tracks, and in the summer you can run or bike on forest roads and paths across open pine barrens.
